Family Law with Heart and Strength

Fort Lauderdale-based attorney Carmen G. Soto has been practicing family law for more than 16 years. She approaches every case with grit and compassion and says that for her, the law is more than just a job; it's a calling.

Carmen G. Soto P.A.

Carmen G. Soto has always wanted to help. When she was younger, she started her own businesses and has always had an entrepreneurial spirit. As the oldest of four daughters, she always wanted to be there for those in need. Born and raised in South Florida—a true melting pot—and coming from a large Hispanic family, she wanted a career that made a difference in people's lives. Her passion for helping was further ignited when she took part in a missionary trip through Central and South America. Soto also was able to expand her cultural experience when she traveled throughout Europe during a study abroad program. Later, after receiving her Master of Science degree in psychology, she worked in counseling so she could help "guide people to a solution when they were hurt or had a problem," she says.

After working for an agency with the Department of Children and Families, Soto attended and graduated from law school. She worked in fields ranging from commercial litigation to bankruptcy, and finally found an area where she could really make an impact in people's lives—family law. Coming from a strong family herself, this was a perfect fit. She started a small firm that has since grown to include divorce, stepparent adoption, paternity, child support, child custody, relocation, domestic violence, and same-sex marriage issues.

Soto's office is directly across the street from the Broward County Courthouse, making it easy for her to form relationships with judicial personnel and staff.

Kids Come First

"In family law, no one is 100 percent right or 100 percent wrong," says Soto, who launched the Law Offices of Carmen G. Soto P.A. in 2005. In fact, she tells clients upfront that her top priority in any divorce is determining what's best for the children involved. After that, she focuses on what's best for her client and finding solutions that work well for both sides. The one thing she guarantees everyone involved is that "my staff and I have our hearts in every client's case."

A Diverse Clientele

Soto is Latin by heritage, and her staff is fully bilingual. She has had clients in the armed forces and federal government agencies, as well as celebrity clients. Her clients come from all over South Florida, other states in the U.S., and countries including Colombia, Venezuela, Argentina, England, Spain, and Russia. She has also represented individuals in traditional and nontraditional roles, helping them deal with the hurdles of divorce.

Regardless of whom she's representing, Soto knows divorces can be expensive. With that in mind, she offers payment plans and accepts many forms of payment. After all, she says, "with a divorce, my clients are already going through a financial crisis."

Soto is rated as an Avvo® top attorney and has been ranked a "10 Best" in attorney-client satisfaction three times by Avvo®. But titles aren't what motivates her. The best reward, she says, is a happy client and a future referral.

"Sometimes," she adds, "lawyers have the stigma of being lions. I'm aggressive when I need to be and compassionate when I need to be. The key to my success has been knowing how to find the balance in both. The end result is doing the best for my clients in what can be one of the most difficult times in their lives." Which, ultimately, is what Soto has always wanted, "to help people when they need it—with heart and strength."

A Special Thank You...

As another challenging year comes to a close, the Administration would like to extend our gratitude to our Teachers who work tirelessly to nurture & educate our students. Your dedication and passion for activating each child's ability to learn & create are appreciated & noticed. As Maria Montessori once said, "Within the child lies the fate of the future." Thank you for making the future a brighter place.
